You will presumably be travelling with a variety of 12 volt devices that need a constant source of power, or you won't be able to use them. While leisure batteries are not typically pre-installed with a caravan, the benefits of having one are clear to anybody who has been stuck without reliable power in the middle of nowhere!

In this guide, we'll highlight the best leisure battery for caravanning - and the factors you'll need to consider before investing in one of these vital sources of power.

Superbatt is the leader in the caravan leisure battery market, and this isn't a surprise considering the large range that they have available compared to competing brands.

The 9000 series is constructed to deal with the daily demands of both the leisure and marine industries making it suitable for caravans, motorhomes and boats. It does this by supplying 12V, 800 amps and 110 Amp-hours while also being maintenance-free.

This is even more so because the demands are becoming greater, which requires a higher quality battery. This battery delivers high-quality performance and is a dual-purpose battery for both starting and auxiliary use.

Another addition to the 9000 series by Superbatt includes this 75AH leisure battery which is great if you have slightly lower power requirements but still need the reliability and peace of mind that comes from a great manufacturer.

This is suitable for both leisure and marine usage and packs a punch with 12V and 75 amp hours while also having 550 cold-cranking hours. As you can come to expect with Superbatt batteries, there is a two-year warranty included with each purchase.

It is a low maintenance battery which makes life significantly easier and is Dual Purpose Batteries making it ideal for both marine Starting & Auxiliary use.
