Palikir features a tropical rainforest climate under the K?ppen climate classification. Common to many areas with this climate, Palikir sees very little variance in its temperatures during the course of the year, averaging roughly 27°C (81°F) daily throughout the year. The town experiences heavy rainfall year-round; on average 5,202 millimeters (204.8in) of rain falls annually, making it the wettest capital in the world.

Since 1989, Palikir has been the federal capital of the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM), which attained independence from, and remains since in free association with, the United States in May 1979. FSM has a constitutional government headed by a president.

The country is independent, but in fact depends on financial support stemming from its Compact of Free Association with the US. As of 2012; the inflation rate was 2% and the cost of living (for imported goods) in Palikir is reportedly very high in comparison with other places in the world.

Bailey Olter High School (former Pohnpei Island Central School or PICS) in Kolonia serves students from Sokehs.
