Greens powders are chock full of vitamins and minerals. Plus many of them have supportive ingredients like probiotics, digestive enzymes, or adaptogens that contribute to your overall health and wellness in different ways.

The problem is that many of them leave a lot to be desired in the taste department. But (spoiler alert) that's not the case with Patriot Power Greens. Not only does it taste delicious, it gets high marks for quality of ingredients, solubility, and price per serving.

Our GGR team is made up of certified personal trainers, CrossFit-L1 trainers, nutrition coaches, Olympic athletes, and other wellness experts who live and breathe health and fitness. We're able to spot good supplements from their nutrition facts and ingredient lists, but when it comes to greens powders, taste is really important.

Because of this, our testers tried dozens of different greens powders, rating them on factors like taste, solubility, side effects, and formulation. These are our findings after drinking the Patriot Power Greens for five days straight.

The company's ethos is to support health, energy, and well-being by providing high-quality supplements. And they put their money where their mouth is. They don't offer a crazy amount of supplements, but the ones they do have are made with impressive ingredients and almost no fillers.

The Patriot Power Greens is one of the brand's most popular supplements. As you probably inferred from the name, it's a super greens powder that contains a blend of fruits, vegetables, digestive enzymes, and probiotics. Almost all ingredients are organic, with a few exceptions.

The Patriot Power Greens are one of the best-tasting greens powders we've tried. While this supplement doesn't contain adaptogens or targeted energy-supporting ingredients (like caffeine), it's loaded with vitamins and minerals.

Plus, when you buy Patriot Power Greens, a portion of the proceeds are donated to various organizations that help support veterans. The company also donates to these organizations separately.

These specs are based on the regular, 30-serving tub of powder. You can also purchase a 60-serving tub or 30 travel packs, but price and price per serving will vary. All other key specs are the same, regardless of which size you choose.

GGR staff writer and certified nutrition coach Amanda Capritto tested the Patriot Power Greens and has a lot of good things to say about it. Aside from its surprisingly incredible taste, she also raves about the solubility and what seems like top-notch customer service. Let's get into it.
