Paying bills online has become a necessity lately, with many people resorting to the help of various applications and companies to pay their utilities. Paying your bills online is not only convenient and less time-consuming but can also help save money and relieve you of the need to have a Bulgarian translator. You may stick to a single payment platform or use a combination of different options. Below is a list of Bulgarian companies that can assist you in paying your bills online.

Cashterminal machines, though not online, will provide the user with a real-time payment option for almost all types of cash services, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. These services include payment of bills for electricity, phone, water, heating, cable TV, internet, bank loans, leases, and insurance. Cashterminal machines can be found in many places throughout Sofia and other Bulgarian cities, with a full map of locations, found here.

The company relies on technology that is validated on a world scale, where the human factor is minimized, and any possibility of error is practically ruled out. There are no additional charges when paying with Cashterminal; you only need to register on their website or mobile application.

If none of the above methods are convenient for you, you can often pay your bills separately directly on the company's website. Most companies provide an English translation of their webpage. Mobile operators such as A1 and Vivacom, offer users the option of paying via mobile app, as well as through a browser.
