It came down to the leg of rookie kicker Spencer Shrader, who delivered in the pressure moment, nailing a 31-yard field goal as time expired to secure a 30-27 victory.

"The biggest emotion in that moment is gratitude, for the opportunity and just happy that I was able to go out and perform for the team," Shrader said.

Shrader has performed well during Harrison Butker's absence. The Chiefs signed him off the New York Jets practice squad. Butker was placed on Injured Reserve last week due to a left knee injury that needed arthroscopic surgery.

"I knew that I'd be getting an opportunity, so I just tried to stay calm, understand that it was going to come at some point and when it did come, I was ready," he explained.

"It's been a whirlwind for sure, but I think the thing that helps in that situation is that I'm around a group of true professionals," Shrader said.

"I couldn't be around a better group, a better team like everyone reaching out trying to get you as comfortable as possible to set you up for a situation like this."

"So really it was a combination of just kind of staying calm, continuing to pray in that instance and then just simplifying everything and understanding that it's just snap, hold, kick."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- Patrick Mahomes threw three touchdowns for the third time in the Kansas City Chiefs' last four games, but it was his legs that saved the day at Bank of America Stadium in Charlotte.

One play after Kansas City had converted a third down to start the drive, Mahomes escaped the pocket to the left and scrambled 33 yards along the sideline, moving the Chiefs from their own 45-yard line to the cusp of the red zone and setting the stage for Spencer Shrader's game-winning 31-yard field goal as time expired.

Mahomes finished 27 of 37 for 269 yards with those three TDs and no interceptions. He also added five carries for 60 yards against a Carolina defense that sacked him five times despite coming into the week with the second-fewest sacks in the NFL this season (12).
